

Registry of Rooms For Young Girl Tenants

That there are more responsible ties in room-renting and room-capturing than are dreamed of in the average philosophy of those who was brought out with some what startling effect at a room-registry conference attended by those interested in room-renting from a variety of angles at the Y.W.C.A. last week.

For instance, there are doubtless many renting rooms who would bear with a distinct shock of surprise the opinion advanced at the conference that the housewife has a duty toward the girl guest, and who through influence on her unscrupulous man have got hold on their girls, not only to slight the housewife, but to neglect and watched over the girl, made him the upholder of the community, Mrs. Hunt suggested the opinion that much friction between room-renters and housewives could be avoided if there were a definite understanding at the beginning.

One discussion towards the end of the conference was manifested in the view that the housewife has a duty toward the girl guest, and who through influence on her unscrupulous man have got hold on their girls, not only to slight the housewife, but to neglect and watched over the girl, made him the upholder of the community, Mrs. Hunt suggested the opinion that much friction between room-renters and housewives could be avoided if there were a definite understanding at the beginning.

Going Into Details.

Data on the selling points of a room was furnished from different angles. Miss Johnson, president of the Muskogee Room Registry, and Miss Mabel Smith, statistician of the high school, MacRae had allowed an informal questionnaire to be completed asking the three points about a room which they considered most desirable and the points which were most disliked. Girls' interests ranked highest, she said, as one of the three most important factors. A good location, either as far from lighting as possible or in a convenient location, and a sufficient heat. The favorable characteristics were definitely to be furnishings of the room, but to be lack of cleanliness, or to be inconvenient location, by a lack of proper lighting, or to be inaccessibility to the bathroom, and to be too close to the kitchen or to the laundry, and to be lack of insulation.

Try Moral Suction.

As far as girls go, it is proposed to be not the right kind, the verdict reached in the discussion seemed to be that while the housewife should not for a minute permit wrong-doing, she should appeal to the girl's higher principles and should not deliberately cast her out to no-telling what fate. In extenuation of the thoughts verging on evil, the girls said, the housewife stated that she was a stranger in a strange land, away from home ties and home protection, and that Tulsa like other cities is not without its share of undesirable type of man to whom a girl will accede to both the center of rooms and the center of rooms from the plan for a central

With the close of the present fields. This time as O'Malley, disguised as an outlaw, he fights a savage fury to a finish in defense of a girl and a boy. His scientific skill is revealing against brute strength when the bully treacherously attacks with a knife. O'Malley wins the yellow ear with one hand, while his boy uses the other to hold the operator suspended.

There are many situations in William S. Hart's Paramount picture "O'Malley of the Mounted," which lift it out of the ordinary western picture class and place it in a category by itself. Some of the punch scenes are presented herewith.

The inexorable law of the Canadian Royal Northwest Mounted Police—GET YOUR MAN! Has O'Malley followed his quarry across the border line into the United States makes a great story.

O'Malley of the Mounted hits upon the strikingly original idea of robbing a bank to gain membership in a gang of outlaws so he can capture the man he wants for murder.

The biggest, most far-fetched ever staged for a motion picture in which the champion bronc busters, ropers and riders of the American west take part. Besides the famous bucking horse riding contests, there are wild steer riding events, wild bucking horse riding races, back bucking horse riding races, racing, and thrilling cowboy games.

Another of William S. Hart's newest.

room registry is retained by Mr. Hunt. Rooms will be listed with their rent and instrument of rental and other points and it will be easy to locate the kind and price of a room desired by a girl, thus saving her and the housewife the trouble and time of calling on persons. At first, the woman made all efforts to fit in with the room-renting system, but the centralized room registry soon made a very worthwhile institution with the participation of the community. Mrs. Hunt said, however, that much friction between room-renters and housewives could be avoided if there were a definite understanding at the beginning.
